THE MYSTIC CREW GONE

Shriners Depart For San Francisco.

GIVEN A BIG SEND OFF

Some Will Wait for the Queen--Zealandia was a Pretty Sight Yesterday.

T is impossible to say that the Mystic Shriners have shaken the dust of Honolulu from their sandals, for Alala--to whom all things are as an open book--knows that the good Nobles and their Ladies will occupy the first few hours of their voyage home to San Francisco by scraping from their feet the clinging mud which they have stolen from the streets of the biggest city in the Pacific Ocean.

They have gone!

The Sons of Islam have departed.

Even now their glittering caravan has slid over the horizon of the watery desert and their camels are humping themselves speedily over the trackless waste in the direction of that auriferous portion of the Greater America which will give McKinley twenty thousand majority in November. That's what the most mystic of the Shriners said would happen so it must be a sure thing.

Promptly at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon the Zealandia left the Oceanic wharf with the majority of the Shriners aboard and steamed away for San Francisco amidst the frantic demonstrations of a couple of thousand people on the steamship's wharf and along-shore. About thirty-five Shriners remained in Honolulu to wait for the departure of the steamship Queen next Tuesday. So entranced were they with Honolulu and its inhabitants that they must needs remain to taste the sweets of the Paradise of the Pacific yet a little while longer. Indeed some of the mystics may remain here indefinitely. It is whispered in the strictest confidence in esoteric circles that Cupid has shot his shafts to good effect in the cases of one or two of the Nobles who made the pilgrimage here from the Coast and that they are likely to settle down here. Be this as it may, the fact is patent that the Shriners had a glorious time here and will proclaim the splendors of Hawaii far and wide upon their return to the land of their birth.

It looked something like the getting away of the Australia in recent days to see the Oceanic wharf one mass of living, pulsing, enthusiastic humanity bedecked in leis, wreathed in smiles and dressed in their best for the occasion.

About an hour before the sailing the procession of home returning Ancient Arabians began to form on Fort street, up town, and then to surge down the street towards the steamship.

They went down in pairs, in bunches and in crowds. And with them they carried little souvenirs of Honolulu.

Some were armed with heavy pieces of sugar cane like unto the samples displayed in a store window on Fort street, from South Kona. Some had fresh poi in tins which they intended putting on ice when they got aboard, so that their friends on the Mainland might sample the Hawaiian staff of life.

Some were wearing native lauhala hats and others had numbers of these finely-worked examples of native art under their arms.

A ponderous Noble went wobbling along with a calabash under one arm and a little stone god under the other, while his lady was proudly bearing the small branch of a mango tree with a single green mango attached thereto.

Beauty was adorned with necklaces of little shells, scarfs of tapa cloth, brooches of sharks' teeth, and a few sporting the feather lei, some of which are genuine and expensive, while others are imitations and as cheap as a rooster's neck foliage.

Several ladies wore belts made of Hawaiian half dollars and quarters, bracelets made of the Hawaiian dimes and other ornaments of money. Two or three nobles carried rolls of native matting, while it was learned from the guardian of the Zem-Zem Springs, aboard the Zealandia, that some of the more mystic potentates, anxious to be able to invent a new drink, took aboard in convenient pocket flasks, samples of swipes, awa and okolehao.
